III. PERSONAL STATEMENT

Integral Honors Program students are a diverse group, with wide-ranging backgrounds, interests, and talents, yet they work together as a community of scholars who are passionate about learning. Given your particular academic and life experiences, interests, skills, and personal qualities, what contribution would you make to the Integral Honors Program community? Submit with your application a typed (i.e. word processed) 200-250-word personal statement explaining what makes you a good candidate for a place in the Integral Honors Program.

IV. ESSAY

Submit with your application a typed (i.e. word processed) critical essay of 600-750 words in response to the following question. Your essay may be informal (e.g. you may speak in your own voice, use the first person, use humor or a light tone), but you should use standard English grammar and punctuation throughout. If you happen to consult, quote, paraphrase, or summarize any outside sources in writing the essay, be sure to mark direct quotations with quotation marks and to cite your sources.

Looking back on your first few weeks of classes at Le Moyne, discuss a book, class reading, campus event, lecture topic, or scientific concept that ignited your passion for learning. How did it do so? How does it inspire you to learn more?

V. FACULTY RECOMMENDATIONS

Please request recommendations from two Le Moyne faculty from whom you are taking or have taken a course: make copies or printouts of the Recommendation Form on the next page and follow the directions on the form.. List the names and departments of your faculty recommenders below so that we can contact them if need be:

FACULTY RECOMMENDATION

INTEGRAL HONORS PROGRAM

Directions for Student:

Ask two Le Moyne faculty members if they will each write a brief recommendation for you in support of your application to the Integral Honors Program. If they agree to do so, give them copies of this Faculty Recommendation Form and ask them to submit the form as instructed below.

Directions for Faculty:

The Integral Honors Program accepts bright, talented, capable students from all majors into our program of interdisciplinary, seminar-style courses. Students best suited to meet the challenges of the Honors curriculum—and who benefit from studying in Honors—are those with some or all of the following qualities: very good critical reading and writing skills; solid analytical abilities; insight; creativity; a genuine interest in learning; an openness to new ideas and new perspectives; a willingness to engage in oral discussion and debate; determination and diligence; and good interpersonal skills.

The Honors Committee examines the merits of each candidate individually, based on the information in the candidate's application and faculty recommendations. A brief assessment of the candidate's strengths and weaknesses as a student based on the criteria listed above will thus be extremely helpful to the Honors Committee in its deliberations.

Please send your recommendation in an email or as a Word/PDF attachment to Matthew Fee at feemj@lemoyne.edu.

→Please submit your recommendations by Wednesday, November 10

Note: The student's application will not be complete without your recommendation.
